

Election Aftermath - Still Reeling?

"Thy will be done..."

These words from The Lord's Prayer had me reeling when I woke up the day after election day and found out Mr. Trump was trailing. With all the meditation and litanies and rosaries and Masses, etc. for the last several weeks, my nervous system was a wreck and still pushed all out on Tuesday. And this is what we got? An apostate Catholic and abortion advocate has the potential to lead this country and is so lucky enough that he will benefit from all the good achievements of the Donald? He will be looking good if he sits and just continues what Trump has started.

Remember, current presidential historians are already calling Trump the greatest president ever. He accomplished so much in four years what others could not do even for 8 years being presidents. He has been nominated four times lately for the Nobel Peace Prize to honor him as the first president to have no wars started and all the peace treaties signed in the Middle East and elsewhere. The list of his accomplishments are here: <https://lc.org/PDFs/Trump.Accomplishments.FINAL.pdf>.

Pondering on this situation, The Lord must be smiling or maybe laughing at me for all these efforts when I should have just stayed put and keep doing what I have been doing before this month, actually since 1991, i.e. working for His greater glory, profit, joy and happiness and the salvation of souls. The solace we could gain from these exercises is the fact that God is happy that we are trying to pursue what we thought would be good for this country and eventually, the world. I am sure He is pleased with our good intentions. His words, "My thoughts are not your thoughts", kept ringing in my ears.

I learned from a saint, which most Traditionalists do not honor, St. Faustina Kowalczyk, this objective of working for the greater glory of God and salvation of souls. At that time, I had so many of her works that the one that stuck to my head is this: "I could more than the world could, in my 8 X 8 foot cell." She does this by constant prayer, meditation, etc. Having a sleeping disorder, I could not go around much, so by the grace of God, I had an example to follow.

By the way, those St. Faustina written works that Traditionalists found offensive, I believe were added on by the modernists, for they were her Polish superiors and confessors who are mostly JP2 disciples. We now have learned that some historical events were just made up or altered. Even during the times of the pharaohs, this is what Blessed Emmerich said, "The history of Egypt is mostly to be ignored, They (the pharaohs) made some up, others they altered." proof positive is the absence in known Egyptian history of the event of The Exodus - the defeat of Ramses. Today the anarchists are changing everything to their liking. So we know, alteration and relative modification of written works could be done and have been done. Maybe I am wrong concerning St. Faustina.

I used to stay away from politics since 1997, when I met Fr. Ong of the Marian Center in Quiapo, Manila and told us that "Politics is the realm of the Anti-Christ, don't waste your time sticking your finger in it." He should have added, "with God as the orchestrator." For nothing happens without God's permission.

So now, I am trying to reach out to all who used to stay out of politics: Let us stay out of it altogether and just do our vows to God and accept His will always and every time. Let this political drama play away from our eyes and ears. God always wills what would eventually accomplish His objectives - for the good of all. Let us respect Him and pray, "Lord, Your thoughts are not our thoughts and they are all incomprehensible to us. Thy will be done, Lord, Thy will be done and have mercy on us, poor sinners for thinking and doing outside Your box."

God bless and keep us all in these uncertain times,
Bro. Ben
